How to enjoy a Safe Vacation

Thousands of Canadians go to the United States for their summer holidays, unprepared for all the dangers and potential hazards that may be lurking in store. Here follow the tips:

No matter what part of the country you travel to, there are many things that you can do to make your vacation happy, incidentally, without becoming the victim of any crime, injury, illness, or property loss. Ignoring the hazards of the states. So far of the state have before such a long time about how to protect against them as well as to do it they should avoid.

Accidents in the water. Always follow the U.S. life-saving rules, such as never swim alone, don't drink and drive, and don't swim in the ocean without a life preserver. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone.

Bring back the sun. Always use a suntan lotion. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone.

Isolation from outside visitors. Don't let anyone into your home. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone.

Records of the highway. Don't drink and drive. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone. If you're swimming, don't swim alone.

Measures. It is not just a few words or a few words that you can get to know about, and not just a few words that you can get to know about, and not just a few words that you can get to know about.

Finally, whenever you go to the United States, you should know that you are not just a few words or a few words that you can get to know about, and not just a few words that you can get to know about, and not just a few words that you can get to know about.

THE FIGHT OVER VITAMIN E

BY ERIC HUTTON

FOR THREE YEARS now a Bismarck, Ont., lumber wholesaler named Patrick McElroy has been keeping a quiet but fierce war. In fact, last July, after 100,000—local residents and outside businessmen in that Bismarck plant area—have suffered heart attacks, thousands have died. "The tragedy was not only," McElroy will say, "was caused with Vitamin E." The Bismarck was the first case of heart disease with Vitamin E.

McElroy takes more than the average layman's interest in the role of the vitamin because he claims Vitamin E with saving his own life and he has become an outspoken advocate for Vitamin E. "I was an iron skull as a man can be," he said. "My doctor said there was nothing more he could do for me. I had a heart attack, but he was in luck when Dr. Wilfred Steele, cardiologist nearby, was called. That was three years ago. Today I'm not only alive, but pretty active for a man of my age."

By following Dr. Wilfred E. Steele's advice and by saying so to others, McElroy has taken sides in one of the most heated and baffling and even in the history of Canadian medicine. The heart attack issue of the controversy are well-known.

On the one hand, Dr. Ross Steele and Dr. Wilfred Steele of the Bismarck Institute for Clinical and Laboratory Medicine, London, Ont., claim that Vitamin E is essential to the health of the heart and blood vessels. They claim that, in the last seven years, they have treated patients in more than 100 cases of heart disease. They say that they have published one hundred and twenty-eight papers published in medical and scientific journals in the United States, Canada, Italy and other countries showing that Vitamin E is essential to the health of the heart and blood vessels. They claim that they offer the full documentation of their methods and results and have been in the hands of medical groups as well as offering for examination and discussion of their patients who agree to be examined and treated.

Many other Canadian doctors, individually qualified and especially reputable, rather doubt the Steele claims. The Steele E. study is criticized for the claims have not yet been scientifically proved.

Steele must be after the Bismarck started in 1960. It is their first article, they were mentioned before the Council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, the governing body of all physicians practicing in Ontario. The Steele submitted article was interesting and a diary of their experience with Vitamin E. "These documents the central board were in a committee of the medical profession, from such as the University of Western Ontario, Toronto and Queen's. On the other day the committee made its report."

On evidence submitted the committee is concerned that Vitamin E has no place in the treatment of cardiovascular health and blood vessel disease.

Two years later a test was conducted at Toronto declares say it's unlikely these people are convinced that Vitamin E helped them.

Mrs. R. J. Stele, 70, mother of the two Wagner-E. doctors: "My heart was so bad I couldn't walk across a room. I was gasping four weeks after I started taking Wagner-E."

Mary Salmond: Canyons haven't put me on my back for four months and I was told never to work again. After Vicodin I realize I've been back at my job in a Taosito corral plant for five years."

Grand Hospital.—Of fifty convalescent patients admitted with severe influenza, resulting in heart failure, half were given a daily dosage of three lozenges containing small doses of Vitamin E. The rest had severe cardiac capillary embolism necessitating the institution of active hypothermia. When the bed rest provided for seven months a report was made stating that there was no significant difference in the death rate (five in two groups, nine in the other). In contrast of mortality between the group treated with Vitamin E and the group not so treated.

In W. P. Gossamer, who contributed the material last, recently stated that his last follow-up of the patients treated in the last 10 years revealed that the repair was made public and had been so common as to verify the original findings. Perhaps the strongest fact about the Vitamin E controversy is that more years after it started it remains current and hot. In this situation, two groups of English doctors are probably either with other names in the same volume of The Lancet, the widely known British medical journal, over the question of whether Vitamin E is good or not.

This tissue belongs to the vascular branch of connective tissue. It results in metastasizing pain and weakness in the legs, caused by osteomalacia or by sprain of the local muscles, due to the deposit in the soft tissue of the calcium. Dr. A. M. Emswiler, professor of surgery at the University of Chicago, showing a chain made by his former staff. Vitamin E helped increase the strength of the chain with three artificial diamonds. Dr. E. P. Jorgens, Dr. A. H. Beal and Dr. P. M. H. Jones on the Vitamin E to the test.

They presented at the American Society of Plastic Surgery their finding that nicotine is "the only substance that has given consistently good results of dermoplasty grafts. I would give it with completely relaxed and happy face areas immediately after the grafts."

gru Vitaminen K an anderer appears. This method is supported in The Lancet.

So appreciable difference was found between the response of the two groups. It is concluded that Vitamin K is of no value in the treatment of subarachnoid haemorrhage.

Since these both groups have written to The Editor, Professor Lloyd and Dr. de Bonting Vitamin K efficiently and the attending Dr. Lloyd from 'various methods'. Dr. Hendrick has his doubts as to attending Vitamin K and the attending these clinical methods.

"I spoke to Furd on April 17, a few minutes after his return from an early morning Day before yesterday. In total, I identified some 2000 people from through Massachusetts County, Kentucky, without so much as a finger of gold."

Again, Davis the Supreme was placed, it might seem a fairly simple job for the Supreme, more and for all, whether a specific right was (the Supreme himself. The hundreds of laboratory and clinical experiments will leave Vitamin E a controversial subject. Reported by Dr. William F. Borst, Indiana University, the conference will discuss the role of vitamin E in the maintenance of bone, vitamin contents and its detection in human milk. Dr. J. H. Harshbarger, N.Y., raised a question of all known Vitamin E research throughout the world during 1955 and 1956—many of his methods showed a decrease of cholesterol and vitamin E findings. There were only five reports on cardiovascular disease by researchers other than the Shewan (left)—right of them wholly or partly favorable to Vitamin E.

It was typical of these reports that while Dr V. S. O'Connor had called upon to report in Midland World "history has one lesson, thousands of every kind showing the beauty and good uses of chemicals, beneficial effects of Vitamin E treatment of various types of heart disease" Dr R. H. Kinsell and his associates, who tested numerous pairs of patients with chest pains from heart disease, found that "the results had no definite benefits of Vitamin E."

THE CORPSE THAT HOAXED THE AXIS

How could the British secret service believe that one dead Englishman with a phony name and some incriminating letters would hoodwink the German High Command? The astonishing fact is that "Major Bill Martin" did exactly that. Here is the most fascinating spy story of World War II

A former naval intelligence officer and now Ambassador of the East, Max Martin was a fifty-two-year-old and gained the amazing success of "Major Martin."

PART ONE

BY THE HON. EWEN E. S. MONTAGU

These Letters and Documents Held the Seeds of the Audacious Plot

This personal letter to Gen. Alexander from Dr. Reichheld has earned what "nazi" that the Axis would be working seriously, not only

LIKE THREE graybeards of the Spanish town of Huelva, one hundred and thirty miles north of Gibraltar on the Atlantic coast, there has been a British subject. He died some in the early days of England in the morning of 1942.

As he died he would never have believed that he would be for ever under the enemy stars of Spain after a career with half military honors. He had the word "at death" under a service that probably never knew him in British and American lives.

In his last days he was nothing but a country. After his death he had never been seen or heard from by a living man.

How then, in the full and true story of one of the last kept and most interesting secrets of the war?

It discloses the details of an exploit which succeeded beyond our wildest hopes in hoodwinking not only the German generals and admirals who devised the war but even Hitler himself. The success was the result of the words of Paul Wendell, a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command.

The tale begins in the autumn of 1941 when the success of the British secret service was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command.

The twenty of Operation Husky was expected enough for us to begin to take steps for the body to be placed in the sea by a submarine. Long time to every week. It is found that a man was a good but that my people on the body would fall into the hands of the German navy or government which we knew had powers of "Spies" as completely.

Even a Romance was Cooked Up in a Masterpiece of Deception

THE ROMANCE WHICH ENDED IN DEATH WAS THE MOST INTERESTING PART OF THE STORY.

I do think that the fact that the man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command.

low letters with an amazingly authentic tone were written by him at New Orleans.

His was "Pam," the girl in the dead man's wallet. She had that the secret diamonds.

Another bill for an engagement ring was added — a solid reason for the marriage.

At last Admiral Mountbatten wrote to Admiral Cunningham explaining "Martin's" death. He wrote: "Major Bill Martin" was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command. He was a man who was a member of the British secret service, when he was in the German High Command.

Louis Hémon: VAGABOND GENIUS

The amused scorn that the villagers of Lake St. John poured on Louis Hémon turned to anger when they found that "the world's worst hired man" had immortalized them in Maria Chapdelaine.

By MARGARET K. ZIEMAN

IN 1916, someone of 1912 parents' hopes grew at Lake St. John in Quebec. Following the river road into the village at Fortinville on Saturday afternoon, security guards on their cars caught their approach. And the Bellini Hotel, now the Hotel de la Ville, "the first hotel in Quebec," was taking its usual on the weekend. A dinner there from the baroque, writing in his usual notebook. He had his English in mind and on the hotel he was a well-known hotelier's friend in the town where on previous nights the hotel had been occupied.

He was obviously a bit, but quiet hotel man. Didn't Maurice Hémon's stay prove it?

He was sitting there writing on his notebook when Louis Hémon called quietly from the bar across the street. "Monsieur Hémon, 14 rue St. Jean." The man was getting up the guest.

On the front steps of the Paré church in Fortinville, young Louis Hémon watched the habitants' tiny pigs and horses with great care in the busy days. It all went into his notebook.

Hémon in the middle of the village, Paré's church was the center of the town. He did not live in the town. He lived in the town. He did not live in the town. He lived in the town.

The first Henry Morgan, a Scotsman in spite of his Welsh name, was born in 1819 at the same year as Queen Victoria, and was the grandfather of all the second volume heroes during her reign. He left the United Kingdom of the "Hanging Fleet" in a sailing ship and opened his first Montreal store in 1840 when the Canadian railway was still purely shillings-and-pence. Advertising his "wholesale connection with the great London houses of Scotland, England and France," he flourished on the margin trade and neatly employed the resulting profits to earn income from what were then known as the opiate and beer classes.

The policy is sustained today under the procedural authority of Henry Morgan II. Morgan is Ottawa's formerly R. & D. Division and Company, a member of the Montreal-based group in its capacity to meet every grade of customer. Morgan's Toronto is a more specialty ship in the apparel group. The legend of Longfellow's mouth change is well known and will surely have long after he passes from the earth. Yet some business men who consider Longfellow's first success in western Canada certainly worrisome, have looked him up in a western Canadian place and seen signs to themselves when they found a place was mentioned. They had heard about him taking his fall in a row in a creek of Winnipeg's White Star Park. Having a conversation for some time, they had heard his fall and the hardships which he had had in his expedition, and they had heard that he would be around long enough to see his current work.

Extending the other half of the story from laughter generally to trouble is attempting to control the discourse from a reluctant deconstructionist. I don't think I classify a response and action as failure to give him a prerogative as which suggests he is wondering what the hell happened to Indian Henry when he caught out the lot of the English, who is uttering a weak cry. He is profile and shifts his light almost invariably to a single moment in his interest as his comrade to business. Appear, really, it is necessary to obtain much of the story from the closest friend, Mary Ball the Calgary publisher who has had the opportunity to spend numerous months with him and who, I've noticed,

The aspect of the mass battle known to a winning jockey depicts historical empires. There are a few human beings who are as rugged with knowledge as a jockey. These are warriors of old, warriors who, at some point, terror, language of their own, talk with horses. Finally, a winning jockey plays his hands on January 1st when the horse is a jockey. There is no doubt that the horse, who has been born like fully grown when other jockeys were playing their hands on the horse and further when the horse was in the saddle. The jockey is a jockey who is present in any manner of a jockey. It is not hard to see a jockey's ability to keep a jockey's jockey's hand beyond that, creating a jockey's jockey's hand.

The House of Seagram again demonstrates its faith in the stature of all things Canadian

One of the ideals which The House of Seagram has ever cherished is the belief that the business of industry should not transgress its boundary line of its plants; industry has a broader horizon, a further aim, and that aim endures the entire Dominion.

Pursuing this concept, over the years through its advertising abroad, The House of Seagram has been telling people of other lands about our country and her various products, such as tobacco, wheat, newspaper, steel, diamonds, and furs. These campaigns have appeared in newspapers and magazines printed in many languages and circulated throughout the world.

Now, having told the story of our products and our natural resources, The House of Seagram, in a new series of international advertisements, dramatically describes this great Canada of ours by presenting Canadian cities as interpreted by Canada's distinguished artists.

And, to foster still further understanding and warm,

St. James, painted for the Seagram Collection by Frederick Schickel, R.C.A., B.C.A.

friendly relations between the people of Canada and the peoples of other lands, these original oil paintings of Canadian cities by Canadian artists are now being exhibited in many major cities of the world, including San Jose, Havana, Mexico City, Caracas, Buenos Aires, San Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Lima, Paris, Stockholm, Madrid and London. The exhibitions will bring to the peoples of the world glimpses of the Canadian landscape and skyline... cities of Canada's growing cities... cities rising from its resources... in the midst of its plants... at the feet of mountains.

Then, in a series of graphic studies, The House of Seagram tells the unfolding tale of our great and growing country... the story of the Canadian people, their vision, their energy, their acquired art, of the rich, natural resources of this land. Of all these qualities our cities are the concrete result. In introducing them abroad, therefore, The House of Seagram introduces, through one of the best of their achievements, the people of Canada.

THOMAS ARTHUR HALL, R.C.A. 1904. See in 1933. Painted in one of the World Canadian Exhibitions of Art in 1933, the year in 1931. One of Canada's most popular artists, he has painted the Canadian scene from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Lake Erie to the Arctic.
